

The Curated Pairing Experience

Our selected pairing combinations not only taste fantastic, but also create savings when offered in a set than when purchased separately. In addition to matching flavours, the pairings also elevate the overall experience of each one of its separate components that evoke the senses, thus creating a deeper appreciation and understanding of cigars. Indulge in this heightened level of sophistication in our peaceful oasis-like cigar lounge that welcomes across all levels be it the novice to the aficionado alike.

The Curated Pairing Experience is ever changing and will be updated with new offerings not just limited to high-end single malt whiskey, aged rum or premium brandy, but also other curated and unique pairings including wine, cocktails and much more. Non-alcoholic drinkers may, likewise, choose their pairings from a selection of mocktails, coffee, masala chai tea or a cup of Nutella hot chocolate.

Tips for Pairing Cigars and Drinks

Generally, the best spirits to pair with cigars are cognac, single malt whiskey, bourbon, rum, rye, and port.

When it comes to cigar pairings, simply match the body of the drink to the body of the cigar.

For example, a light-bodied cigar can go well with white wines, young reds or blended scotches.

Medium-bodied cigars pair well with Speyside and some Lowland single malt whiskeys, most Irish whiskeys, rums, bourbons, ryes or ports.

Full-bodied smokes are a great match with peaty Islay, heavier Highland single malts, or dark stouts.

These cigar pairing tips are meant to get you started. Your taste is the final judge as to what works and what doesn't. Have fun testing out different cigar and drinking pairings and discover what's right for you.

Ultimately, balance is the key to pairing cigars and drinks. One shouldn't outdo the other. Rather, they should enhance each other.

Cognac and Cigar Pairing

Both cognac and cigars are characterised by exquisitely bold notes in terms of colour, aroma, and flavour.

The most important factor for a well-balanced pairing is to let neither the cognac nor the cigar overpower one another. To balance this pairing, do consider the taste and body of both the cognac and cigar, matching the two by keeping these in mind - a full-bodied cognac with a full-bodied cigar; a light-bodied drink with an equally light smoke.

For instance, a light-bodied cigar and a VSOP cognac would be the best way to start one's sensory experience, as it accustoms one's palate to the taste. From here, one can move on to medium-bodied pairings to discover richer, bolder flavours.
